March 2nd 2010, Hammersmith, London – CML Software Limited launched “RADAR”, its new enterprise sales and lettings system, at the Association of Residential Lettings Agents (ARLA) Annual Conference. CML, a leading software supplier of residential lettings, property management and accounting software to household names such as Savills PLC, Chesterton Humberts and Kinleigh Folkard & Hayward, showed RADAR to attendees of the conference for the first time, and received a very positive reaction.

“We are very excited by the outlook for RADAR which is the latest addition to our product portfolio, and uses cutting edge web technologies to deliver a fully integrated front office residential sales and lettings front office solution, aimed at large and medium sized estate agency groups who want to be able to manage their entire residential business through one intuitive and easy to use interface.” says Robert Horsford, Managing Director of CML, adding “We believe that the combination of CML’s property management and accounting software integrated with RADAR which brings together all front office users is a first for the property market, combining all of the elements required to manage the full gambit of residential estate agency software requirements.”

Al Chetwode, new investor and CML’s Commercial Director comments, “Now front office users can be multi-discipline with all of their clients in one database, with the system designed around user’s roles. Single client records mean no more duplication and provide our clients with excellent contact management potential. They can also access the system from anywhere in the world, and on top of that sales and lettings staff can have shared diaries allowing office staff to work more efficiently together.”
